

ARUNDAS P

I am Arundas P, a final year Fine Arts student in painting at the College of Fine Arts, Kerala, Thiruvananthapuram. My artistic practice is deeply influenced by my roots in Naduvathur, Koyilandy, Calicut, and revolves around translating personal anxieties and fears into surreal visual narratives.

Through my work, I explore the interplay between reality and imagination, drawing inspiration from places tied to my memories and surroundings. I primarily work with mixed media, incorporating charcoal, pastels, acrylic, and watercolor, often experimenting with textures to externalize emotions and create depth.

My fascination with human psychology drives me to intertwine personal experiences with broader themes of concealment, resilience, and identity. Mangrove trees symbolize hidden aspects of the self, snails embody perseverance, while algae and fungus reflect growth and decay. Influenced by Anselm Kiefer, Salvador Dalí, and The Scream, my work balances the real and the surreal, capturing the silent struggles that shape human existence.
