ABOUT MY PRACTICE

Every thing has its own being. Our being is about how we experience and understand the world through our sensoriums. Time and space influence how we realise things. And these are also temporal in nature. How we experience an instance also depends on our mood (as a construct of past experiences we have gone through), which is formulated by the social structure we have lived through.

Through my practice, I try to reconsider certain sensual experiences I have. Although everything we encounter is a sensual experience, I am selectively taking some of them. These selections are influenced by sociality.
